As outlined in our previous report, being a publisher takes getting used to. Because a large part of our work is still done by hand, we have had to learn a few things the hard way. We have learned a lot about the importance of communication, the value of a good editor, and the need for a strong marketing strategy. We have also learned that it is not always easy to get a good product out of a good idea. We have learned that it is not always easy to get a good product out of a good idea. We have learned that it is not always easy to get a good product out of a good idea.
