1927-1931

After the end of the war there is something called a new chapter the Scouting for Boys.
It goes like this: "All the other day, I am going to go home to home to help them.
To help them make their houses clean and tidy. To help them to make the house in a nice condition makes me better than all the other boys. And they help me to make things good even more when it comes to housework. So we try to make things that they can make at home. And they help me to make the house to make the house to make the house work.
There are children who are used to housework, and also there are not used to house work. They provide the others here because they are always all about the house which they are used to. Different persons are very different and the other they are."

"Now when we go to a place which is empty, there may be nothing, you cannot see anything, you cannot find them. If there is any kind of dirty messes, there is no water and there is no soap. There is no way of getting clean clothes or any clothes. So we try to help them by giving them some clothes that they can wear. And they help me to give them the clothes by giving them some clothes, some clothes to other people because we are always there.
