we have no more than just a few weeks left to do

Some of these are based on simple, common methods, while others are more complex.
The first part of this section contains the simpler methods.

collection was at the same time as our first, and we do not know what effect it had upon us. At the same time, many other groups, such as the Californian, were working, but none of them had performed so well as we did. The whole value of ours was far above those others, though, and we were very successful. Since then, the value of Harvest has increased, and we have won many more awards. The Californian, however, has not done as well as we have.

...and when all you can do against someone is ignore them, then you've got to ignore them, and then if they persist in their ways or their behavior, then you've got to ignore them again, and then if they persist again, then you've got to ignore them again, and so on and so forth, until you've got to ignore them so many times that they finally give up.

When we are asked where we stand, the answer is always the same: "We are still in the process of defining our position." This is a common response among those who have been involved in the peace process, and it is one that has been used by many different groups and individuals throughout the negotiations. The reason for this is that there is no single answer to the question of what constitutes a just peace, and therefore no single way to achieve it. Instead, the answer must be found through a process of dialogue and negotiation between all parties involved.

These simple steps can help to prevent the onset of some of the more serious health problems associated with smoking.
